THE TRIAL OF DR. J. W. HUGHES. The Murderer of Miss Parsons The Spree at the Grocery. 2:40 10:00 Graphic Account of the Murder. THE FLIGHT AND CAPTURE. 2:15 8:50

Court met at two o'clock P. M., when William Robinson was recalled for cross examination:

I think that while they were in the road in my wagon, Tamzen said, when her mother wanted to hurry, "Hold on?" The old lady was excited, but Tamzen, was quiet and not excited. Hughes said, "lin life was worth nothing without Tamzen, and if he had wanted to ruin her, he could have done it." He said, "I have not done it under any excitement or impulse of the moment, but had studied the thing over," I think he said for two weeks. He drew a flask out of his pocket, took a drink, when I told the men not to let him drink, for he probably had poisson in the flask. But he drank. At Bedford, we put Hughes in the cout that girl, which he wanted.

TESTINGST OF DE. TLY. J. S. Ely culted: I live in Newburgh.
Keep the Cataract House. Remember the time Tamsen was shot. Saw Dr. Hughes the night previous at my house. About eleven o'clock that night some one called at my door. Going to it, I found Dr. H. there with Mr. Russell and a man driving the carriage. They went into the bar room, drank, smoked, I think, &c. The Doctor spoke of going up in the country to see a patient, and Russell. the country to see a patient, and R. aided, "They were going about four miles in the country. The Doctor had a limb to imputate." Staid about fifteen minutes. J sent naw Dr. H. about four o'clock the next atternoon. He was under arrest. The Doctor went into the wash room of my hotel, washed, combed his hair, and had some thing todrink. Can't testify exactly us to what was said. I said in substance to Dr. H.,
"this is a bad job." He said but little, "you think so." Can't recollect what else, if anything, he said. Doctor pand for the drinks,
I think, Don't know who called them. Think officer McKinstry offered to pay, but the Doctor said "No. I'll pay for them." The Fincest Salisbury called: I kept the Frank-lin House in Bedford last July and August. Was at home the day Tamzen Farsens was shot. Heard of it immediately. Dr. Hughes staid at my home a part of the night pre-vious, arriving there between midnight and two o'clock in the morning. Saw the party but not to speak to them that night. Spok to them, Hughes, Bussell and Curr, abon seven o'clock the next morning, when they and come out into the bar room from tak proakfast. Knew only Dr. Hughes. He in-reduced me to Russell, whem he addressed as Major somebody. I think Major Hanson. asked the Doctor where he had been? He said he had been to Independence to ampu-tate a limb, see a patient, or something of that kind. Asked him how his business was He said, "good, enough for ten more like myself". They then paid their bills, can't say whether Hughes or Eussell paid, but hey divided the change they received They then started, got as far as the doo They then started, got as far as the door, when I motioned to Hughes, and he came back. I asked him how he had got along with his difficulty in Cleveland. He said, "it was all settled." They then went off. intersection of Fulton street and at the intersection of Fulton street and at

TUESDAY EVENING, Dec. 12, 1865. In whatever light we are led to regard the present unsettled and aluggish condition of usiness throughout the country, whether as premonitory of a better or worse state a things, there can be no longer any doub that there is to be a gradual and steady set tling down of values of everything to a level the C. & M. Bailroad Companies. The case which the people are satisfied to accept as safe and substantial. Whatever may have been the doubts in the public mind a month ago in reference to the policy of contraction made it a popular theory, and the few who are still unable or unwilling to endorse it. are not less careful than those who do in arranging their operations to suit the order of things that are looked for as the inevitable result of its effective operation. This is observed not only in the caution and conservtism of bankers and business men, but also in the universal economy of the masses, and it is more especially to this latter feature that we may look for the best results. Everything that is constituent to the daily life f the people, from the day laborer up through all grades of society, is being regulated with especial reference to this acceptd policy, and no argument, however ing ous, designed to show either the impracti cability or danger of the position, is of th east weight or influence. The well-founder position of President Johnson, that the pay ment of the nation's debt must find material assistance in the rugality of the people, could not have received a more thorugh acquiescence from all classes than it Magazine or Weekly for four do lars.
